

A THEATRE CAPE OF WHITE BROCADE, ELABORATELY FRILLED WITH CHIFFON AND LINED WITH WHITE GLACE.

THE AVERAGE DAY'S DUTIES OF THE CITY SOCIETY WOMAN.

TO BE A COLLECTOR OF SOME PARTICULAR ARTICLE OF BRIC-A-BRAC IS NOW ONE OF THE LATEST FADS OF MILADY.

"I must positively go somewhere where I will have a complete rest this summer," said Mrs. Mulifarious to her husband. "I am completely worn out, and the doctor says I must absolutely have a let-up from all harassing occupations." "Why, Milly," said her denser half, "what on earth have you to do but amuse yourself! You keep house, to be sure, but you have plenty of servants, and if I do not grumble about the bills I do not see why that should worry you. The children are healthy and well enough behaved, and you can employ your time in any way you like. I really do ot see what you have to 'wear you out,' as you

"I'm sure, John, I cannot understand how you can say such a thing," said the lady, greatly incensed. "You men cannot begin to realize a woman's work. If you had the strain upon you that I have, I do not believe that you could endure it a week. Just to give you a sample I will tell you what I had to do yesterday. In the first place, when I came down to breakfast I found a tremendous pile of letters at my plate-two invitations for dinner from equally desirable places for the same evening-a note from Lilly A-- asking me to luncheon, a letter of explanation from one of the men I expected to dinner last night saying he could not come, which necessitated writing ten notes to secure one man at the eleventh hour to charitable bazaar, which in an evil hour I had promised to dispose of: a flattering invitation to replace him; a package of tickets address the Woman's Sanitary League on the subject of back yards, a letter asking me about a maid I had last year who I am sure stole my things, but who I know would sue me for defamation of character if I said so, and a lot of other notes and letters, all of which had to be attended Then the cook came up to say the range was broken, and it could not be put in order in time for the dinner party which was on for that night, a crisis which I met and overcame. Then the entirely in menu had to be discussed and the details settled birelings. menu had to be discussed that the natural deprayity upon, and cook, who, with the natural deprayity of her kind, had seemed on the point of leaving in a huff, was appeased, and she started ahead with Then, just as I was about to go out to order the flowers and bonbons for the table, the housemend came to me with the pleasant intelligence that that imp of a Jack, to tease her, had poured plaster of paris down the drainpipe of her sink-whereupon I had to send posthaste for a plumber. Finally, however, I started out with a list a mile long, more or less; nursery necessities replenishings for the seamstress, decorations for the dinner table, etc., and another list about another mile long from cook, who was still in a bad humor. I always make a point, if I am not going out, of being home for the children's dinner, so I rushed back, too tired to eat, and had barely time to change my gown and get to the meeting of the directors of the — Hospital. Afterward I paid a number of pressing visits, looked in on four after-noon teas, and reached home just in time to keep

"Then you came in, you know, John, very cross You said your collars were badly laundered, your evening clothes only half brushed, your shoes not varnished, etc. When I got you appeased I had the children for fifteen minutes, which is a duty I never neglect, and they do nothing but ask me for things, and make complaints of each other and the servants. Then I dressed for the dinner, an appointment with the new English barytone for whom I am helping to secure drawing-room engagements, and who comes especially recommended by English H. R. H.'s and no end of foreign granwhich you must acknowledge was a great success."

"How you do everything you do, Mrs. Multifarious, I never can make out," said Mrs. Monotone, after we went into the drawing-room. 'My husband always says you are a perfect wonder.' So you see, sir, other people do not think as you do that I have nothing to do! Finally, as you know we finished up with the dance at Mrs. B.'s, and if you imagine that a woman can keep on living a life like that, day after day, without needing rest, all I can say is that you do not know what you are talking about."

A MARK OF DISTINCTION.

Individuality is always a mark of distinction, and fashionable women are continually seeking means

IN THE SOCIAL WORLD. to enhance their own personality. To be a collector of some particular bric-a-brac-and it goes without saying that it is always a costly kind-is one of the latest fads of my lady, and her particular fads become known through her contributions to the ever-popular loan exhibitions. One wellknown society woman has an array of watches which is said to be unequalled by any other private collection. Another woman is collecting snuff boxes, and has written out a series of interesting memoirs of their respective owners, which she has > Fans have many attractions for collectors, as, mounted on plush and framed under glass, they make exquisite mural decorations. Strings of rings are a recent fancy, and they generally have his-tories more or less interesting. Many, of course, are intrinsically valuable, but they range from the coarse iron thumb ring and betrothal rings of the peasant to the early Italian rings in which, under the enamelled semblance of a beautiful woman's head, set in a frame of precious stones, was concealed the deadly drop destined to destroy.

> One of the oddest accumulations of curios, made by a woman who is rather eccentric, is a collec-tion of shoes of all ages and nations, their bulk necessitating a museum built for the purpose. A WARNING TO THE CARELESS MISTRESS.

"Mrs. S- is as nice a lady as I ever saw, but she should keep her help better in hand," said a country fireman, after the last smoking bit of debris had been extinguished, and what a few hours before had been a beautiful country house with a delightful entourage of well-kept lawns and low shrubbery was now an awful blackened ruin, surrounded by a dreary waste of water, mud and cinders-a hideous blot on the face of the smiling

If they cannot take sufficient time from so-called social duties to see that their establishments are social duties to see that their establishments are safely guarded, they should adopt the English method and have a competent housekeeper. In a house where a hundred and fifty lamps are filled and lighted every evening (a true count at a well-known fushionable country house), it will be easily seen how necessary if must be that constant surveillance should be given.

When a fire is first discovered in a house few are likely to preserve any presence of mind, and the example of a methodical woman who has a large and isolated country house and who puts her children and servants through a fire drill once a month might well be followed. This exercise, it is needless to say, is the delight of all the children and affords also a good deal of amusement to the transient guests who from time to time have a chance of witnessing the odd spectacle. Even the rope ladders are not forgotten, but are suspended from the windows of the second and third stories, and, playing that they are fleeing for their lives, the members of the family scramble down from the second and third stories with the greatest enjoyment. In case of a real fire such training must un-

Although the existing fashions for the summer of 1897 have been declared and fully presented to e readers of The Tribune, the apparently minor but really all-important details which make a gown distinguished and what is known as the dernier cri" are so many and vary so constantly that the subject seems inexhaustible.

which seems destined to be popular is the opening on the side of both waist and skirt. On the former the opening is covered with lace, or mousseling de

The imitations are so cleverly joined that it is almost impossible to detect the difference, the latter, however, having the advantage of a better fit, especially if the wearer is inclined the emboapoint. Skirts are becoming more and more sheathlike in their effect. The latest tailor-made skirts are veritable riding skirts in their cut, and are called vjupes Amazones." In their cut, and the rounded the severity of these cloth skirts and princesse cut gowns are the frou-frou effects of the organizes, grenadines and soft summer silks—everything quivers and shakes; the soft frilling around the neck, the pliesées of the hate, and the ruffles or pleats of the skirts—a purely feminine style of dressing which is adorable when contrasted with the mannish aspect of the divers, outing costumes which custom and convenience and even safety have made imperative. Fashionable women delight in these transformations. To allo off a golf frock or a habit and reappear in a few minutes in a resplendent tea gown, to assume a correct dinner gown later on, and for afternoon drives, late teas or garden parties to come out in the freshest and most elaborate confections, is the delight of my lady, who only cares for the masculine attire as a convenience. She has not the slightest desire or intention of giving up her feminine finery and adopting the reform garments proposed by a minority of her sex as her regular apparel. The cool afternoons of early summer make a good-looking jacket a necessity. A pretty little coat from the Maison Worth, which is by reason of its military character called the "Premier Consul," is of military blue cloth with rever

THE WEEK. IN SOCIETY.

Decoration Day was utilized for all it was worth by the hollday-makers. In spite of the threatening weather and a shower or two at the beginning of the day, thousands of people enjoyed themselves by sea and by land. Horse-racing and yacht-racby sea and by land. Horse-racing and yacht-racing attracted the greatest number; then there were baseball matches, shooting parties to Westchester, golf at Knollwood and Ardsley, polo games at Cedarhurst and Meadowbrook, fishing parties to Tuxedo, and tennis and golf wherever youths and maidens met together with nothing else to do. The day, so far as New-York was concerned, presented a social blank. The haunts of fashionable people were deserted and the clubs were forlorn.

The June brides were met by the most perfect weather, and it is beyond the memory of man when a temperature so moderate and pleasant marked the entrance of the month of roses. The weddings of the week were many, and it is estimated that thousands of dollars were spent on Tuesday and Wednesday for orange blossoms. Those who love to look on a gay wedding crowd in a church floodwith sunlight, adorned with roses and spring blossoms, and with every seat filled with attractive and fashionably costumed women, had abundant opportunity for their gratification at the wedding of Miss Eliza Day Campbell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Campbell, to John J. Boyd, son of James R. Boyd, of New-Brighton, Staten Island, which took place at 12:30 o'clock on Wednesday afternoon, in the Church of the Holy Communion, South Orange, N. J. The bride was sumptuously dressed in white satin and point lace. The maid of honor was in pink, and the bridesmaids were in extremely effective gowns of apple-green chiffon over silk of the same shade and picture hats also of chiffon trimmed with black ostrich plumes. The ushers were faultless in their pearl-gray trousers and long frock coats. It was a gay company at the church and a merry party at the reception. which was held at the home of Mrs. Campbell, a short distance from the church. Just before Mr. Boyd and his bride departed on their honeymoon trip, the Virginia reel was danced on the lawn, the bride and bridegroom leading. A special train from the correlation of the control Hoboken carried the guests from this city to Orcinders—a hideous blot on the face of the smiling summer landscape.

The man's remark was a comment upon the old story of the carelessness of servants and the negligence of mistresses, which, in this instance, had been illustrated by such a terrible object lesson.

The frequency of these disastrous conflagrations of late should be a warning to the careless young mistresses of our big American establishments, where the servants have no recognized head, as in England, and constitute a domestic oligarchy, each support the sample of the servants have no recognized head, as in England, and constitute a domestic oligarchy, each support the sample of the servants have no recognized head, as in England, and constitute a domestic oligarchy, each support the sample of the servants have no recognized head, as in England, and constitute a domestic oligarchy, each support the sample of the support the sample of the support to the suppo

The fashionable wedding in town on Wednesday was that of Miss Mary Hutton Ecclesine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph B. Ecclesine, fr., to Alexander Mercer Pell, son of the late Colonel D. Archibald Pell, which was celebrated in the after-noon at the home of the bride's parents, No. 1,814 Lexington-ave. Invitations to the ceremony and reception were confined to relatives and personal friends of the couple, but it was a jolly wedding, accompanied by lights, flowers and good music The bride, who is an extremely handsome girl, looked a picture of loveliness in her bridal gown of white satin. The marriage ceremony was per-formed in the front drawing-room by the Rey. John Tetreau of St. Jean the Raptiste Church, Mr. and Mrs. Pell will make their home for the summer at the bridegroom's country place, Brook-side, near Oswego, N. Y.

The marriage of Miss Fannie Remsen, a daughter of the late Robert G. Remsen, of this city, to Winfield Scott, which took place privately in St. James's Protestant Episcopal Church, New-London, on Tuesday, was the matrimonial surprise of the week. For months past Miss Remsen and the members of her family were kept busy denying that she was engaged to Mr. Scott, although there seemed to be among her intimate friends a sort of understanding that the couple were engaged, and, in fact, a close friend of the Remsen family asserted no later than Esturday that their marriage would take place before the first week in June had passed. The news of the marriage was a surprise to society in town. Mr. Scott arrived at New-London on Monday, and on Tuesday the Rev. Dr. Alfred Pools Grint performed the ceremony in the church of which he is rector. Only the members of Miss Remsen's family were present. Mrs. Scott of Miss Remsen's family were present. Mrs. Scott, who has three slaters—Mrs. Charles Berts Hill-house, Mrs. Robert A. McKim and Miss Margaret Remsen—inherited from her father a large income. Mr. Remsen, who died a year ago last January at his home. No. St. Fifth-ave., was at that time president of the Patriarchs, and one of the original members of that cranization. Mr. Scott is a grandson of General Winfield Scott, and is a member of the Union Club and also of the 7th Regiment Veterans.

Several engagements were announced last week including those of Miss Cornelia Livingston Crosby, daughter of Mrs. Robert Raiston Crosby, of No. 118 East Twenty-fourth-st., to Alfred Duane Pell, only son of the late George W. Pell; of Miss Josephine Donahue, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Donahue, of No. 122 East Seventy-first-st., to Arthur J. Morgan, and of Miss Mary Tevis, daughter of the late Marshall Tevis, of Philadelphia, to Jerome Davis Greene, of Boston. Miss Crosby, whose mother was Miss Jane Murray Livingston, is distantly related to Mr. Pell, whose father was known as a collector of antique silver, china and porcelains. Mr. Pell also has a reputation as a collector. He was graduated from Columbia College ten years ago, and has spent most of his life since then in travelling, visiting all parts of the world in search of additions to the collection gathered by his father. About two years ago Mr. Pell ered by his father. About two years ago Mr. Pell bought the mansion at the southeast corner of Fifth-ave, and Seventy-fourth-st, which was built by the late William Pickhardt. The house is one of the largest of those in Fifth-ave, opposite the Park, Mr. Pell is now occupying a part of the house. The wedding will take place in the last week in June, at the home of the bride's mother, and the honeymoon will be passed in California. The details of the wedding have not been arranged, nor will they be for several days to come.

The marriage of Miss Ella Geisse, daughter of late Mrs. William F. The calendar announces summer's arrival, yet the summer exodus has barely begun. Many have not yet completed those preparations upon which much of the comfort of summer sojourns depends. The writer has striven in this column to bring together reader and seller, but realizes that it is impossible to cover all the ground unless aided by those who have "good things" to dispose of. Apparently triffing conducives to health, comfort or convenience whi find a ready market if their merits are herein set forth.

There are few summer resorts within reach of this city the engagement books of which are yet filled, though many of them are making herculean efforts, through agents and circulars, to reach the public. Again, while many have already equipped themselves with any quantity of impedimenta, they have not yet secured the most desirable things, simply because they do not even know of their existence. The house of Du Vivier & Co., No. 22 Warren-st., is prepared to supply the summer needs of critical purchasers who have foresight to select the wines and liquors they prefer before eaving the city, and the wisdom to only where excellence is assured. In whiskies they offer Kinahans "L. L." Irish; John Walker & Sons. Scotch; "Betverness," Oldest and Finest Bootch; "Ceronet" and "Gilt Edge" American Ryes. Coates Original Pymouth Gin is peculiarly line and an essential element of "dry" cocktalis. Their table and Chatcau Charets, Sauternes and Burgundies are importations from their own houses. Perrier-Jouet Champagne is conceded by connoisseurs to be the most uniformly delicate in the market. To suit differing tastes are the "Special," "Reserve" and "Brut." They sell only goods of the very highest grades.

With the approach of the summer heat, the head of a family looks about for a weapon wherewith to forefend those attacks of debil'ty, loss of appetite, nervous fever and exhaustion which follow in the trail of the baleful dog-star. forciend those attacks of debity, 1988 of appetite, nervous fever and exhaustion which follow in the trail of the baleful dog-star. Quina-Laroche, Laroche's Cinchona Wine, nas an established reputation as the best of all preparations for this purpose. The London Lancet' says of it: "It is an agreeable and doubtless highly efficacious remedy. This Vinous-Elixir is the most powerful and valuable of the preparations of Cinchona as a strengthening and anti-febrile restorative. It is also prepared with iron for cases wherein that is indicated. For sale at all druggists.

Messrs. Pratt & Lambert, of No. 109 William-st, the well-known varnish house, having reorganized, with increase of capital and new works, will at once take up the manufacture of high-grade finishing varnishes, hearing the authorized trade marks of Robert Ingham Cark & Co., L'd, of London, Parls and Hamburg, who supply the British Admiralty, the Indian Government and other large consumers. Pratt & Lambert offer superior varnishes for all household purposes. Their "No. 61" Floor Varnish, made expressly for this purpose, is easily worked, exceedingly durable, dries hard overnight, does not crack nor blister, and is not affected by either hot or cold water.

Children and adults alike suffer from the irritation of poison-by. Heretefore there has been no remedy; only a few doubtful palliatives. Hirax, the harmless vegetable lotion, however, affords certain and instant relief for this, and for all insect stings. If your druggist doesn't keep it, write to the Hirax Cempany, No. 351 West Twenty-sixthstic for a supply.

No article of food before the public has been received with greater favor wherever introduced, than the Kneipp Mait Coffee. Its hygienic value equals its intrinsic merits. Physicians appreciate the enormous injury wrought by excessive coffee drinking. Laymen should learn the facts, and adopt this salutary and agreeable beverage in their families.

Most people, hig and little, are cross before breakfast. Germen promotes harmony by satisfying appetites, while aiding digestion. Prepared from California white wheat, it's a perfect healthfood for epicures. Fifteen centa, in Germea, represents as much nourishment as eighty cents, in heef. Three cents furnishes a breakfast for six hungry people. All grocers.

WOMAN'S PAGE APPRECIATED. To the Editor of The Tribune. Sir: There has never been a page of the daffy papers which was more of an object lesson for the elevation and purification of the press than The clevation and purification of the present than I can Only Woman's Page. One of the greatest needs of the hour is cherfulness, and the Sunshine column should send an X ray into every despondent heart. Truly yours. MRS. EMILIE D. MARTIN. National Superintendent, Department of Work for the Promotion of Purity in Literature and Art.
